

Supporting & Transforming Customer Supply Chain During and Beyond Covid-19: Continuous Improvement

Current Environment

Covid-19 has revealed existing weaknesses and pain points in supply chains that have a negative impact on both, cost and the ability to serve the customer.

80% of the customers

have declared reduction of cost-to-serve through continuous improvement as one of their top focus areas

Customer Challenge

Now, supply chain managers are tasked to mitigate the revealed weaknesses and to improve resilience while being constrained by limited resource availability and stretched logistics budgets. Businesses need to drive the cost down immediately, but finding resources with the required analytical capabilities and functional know-how to do that is a challenge.
